ENGLISH PROSE FICTION.

In this List each Work is entered twice, viz., under the name of its author, and also in the alphabetical order of the first word of its own Title, except when that first word is the article a, an, or the, in which case the second word is used.

When a Work is followed by the name of a Magazine, for instance: "Abbott (J.), Rodolphus [Harper's Monthly, v. 4], 1584J," it signifies that the story in question will be found in a serial form in the particular volume of the Magazine indicated.

Pseudonymous Works—or works written under a nom-de-plume—will generally be found entered under such nom-de-plume, seeing that it is the one by which the author is usually best known to the reader. As, for instance, in the case of "Ouida," which is the nom-de-plume adopted by Mademoiselle Louise de la Ramé. The real names of authors, however, when known, are also entered in their proper alphabetical sequence, accompanied by a reference to the Pseudonyms under which their works are given.

The fullest entry of any work of fiction will generally be found where it appears under its title, in order to save space.

When several numbers follow a work, as in "Abbot" The, by Sir W. Scott, each additional number denotes a duplicate copy, so it will be seen there are five copies of this work in the Library.

A Subject Index to many of the Novels and Romances will be found at the end of this class. The period or subject of many works has also been noted in brackets following the title entries.

To save space under author entries the references to many of the Magazines have been abbreviated, as for instance: "All the Year Round" [A. Y. R.]; "Once a Week" [O. a W.]; "Leisure Hour" [L. H.]; "Sunday Magazine" [S. M.], &c., but they will generally be found in full under the title entries.

SUBJECT AND CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX TO FICTION.

This index does not refer to every work in Fiction, but only to such as appear to have some special design, or that give a fair amount of interesting information on some popular or useful subject. Many of the works of Fiction having no particular object or matter other than recreative, do not come within the scope of this index, and have therefore been left out. The compiler regrets that the time at his disposal did not permit of such adequate treatment of this work as he would have desired, and that many interesting references have doubtless been omitted on this account. The number of any work required will be found in the Fiction Class List.

Abbreviations of Magazines have been occasionally used in the Fiction Class List and in this Index, as shown in the following List. Any others will be understood.
